

SMART should install new HD cameras

I REFER to "Drivers who are not so SMART" (Sunday Star, Sept 25) which said a casual observation at the Stormwater Management and Road Tunnel (SMART) showed that most cars are clearly disregarding the 60kph speed limit, with some obviously going at more than 100kph.

That is almost twice the speed limit. I am appalled by the statement that there is little the authorities can do about the speeding.

SMART public relations manager Mohd Noor Mohd Ali even went on to say enforcing the speed limit remained a difficult task.

I strongly believe the relevant authorities should be proactive and not wait for a catastrophe to occur before taking measures.

Maybe SMART can try installing the new HD speed cameras and impose hefty fines.
