

Green, green moss of home

Senior citizen Hamidah Che Mud, 74, using a piece of polystyrene to get from her house to dry land after it was inundated by waist-high waters at Kampung Teluk Baru, Tanjung Lumpur. Hamidah says her house has been in this state for over five months after reclamation works started on a building site in the area nearby. She claims the developer failed to take into consideration the flow of the river which caused water to stagnate in her neighbourhood. Hamidah said the mossy water is the result of river water mixing with sewage, which causes a stench and also breeds mosquitos and snakes. — Bernama
