DETERMINED: Lee Ban Seng vows to tackle the poor drainage in Kajang that has caused major floods in the area

NO more flood woes. That is one of the promises given by BN candidate for Kajang state seat, Lee Ban Seng, who vowed to tackle the poor drainage here which had caused three major floods in the past five years.

Lee said BN had tackled a few drainage issues in several areas such as in Kwantung Baru and Kampung Baru Bukit Angkat.

"We have upgraded the drainage in these areas and worked with the Housing and Local Government Ministry to address other issues as well.

"I am also planning to reduce the traffic problems along Sungai Chua by building better access and expanding the major roads," he said.

Lee, or Jeffrey, is a Kajang boy as he was born and bred in the area. It is one of the plus points that will appeal to the locals here as he knows the town well, and would wrest back the Kajang seat from the opposition, he said.

Kajang seat was won by PKR's Lee Kim Sin in 2008 while PAS' Che Rosli Che Mat won the Hulu Langat parliament seat.

This year, Lee will be contesting against five other candidates — PKR man Lee Chin Cheh and four other independents — Mohd Iwan Jefry Abdul Majid, Ong Yan Foo, Mohd Khalid Kassim and Mohamad Ismail from Berjasa.
